

Extending The Experience

Below are ideas for how to continue learning about the lessons taught in "How Turtle Flew South for the Winter."

■ Call a nearby environmental organization to find out about good places to go locally to watch birds. Take a field trip to a good vantage point on a clear, moonlit night in the spring or fall to watch and listen for migrating flocks of songbirds. Or, visit this spot during the day to watch for hawks, geese, cormorants and other daytime migrants.

■ Make a bird mobile.

■ Make a chart listing common animals in your area that undergo deep hibernation and torpor. Keep a log of sightings of these animals throughout the year. Begin looking for them just before the cold season comes, and continue looking for a while after spring arrives. What can you conclude from your observations about the habits of these animals? Combine this activity with written research reports on the winter habits of these animals to verify your findings.

Find more games and activities at aetn.org/gobbledybook

Activity adapted from *Keepers of the Earth,
Native American Stories and Environmental Activities for Children,*
By Joseph Bruchac and Michael Caduto
ISBN 9781555913854